

This small bottling of Saison Vert came from a special cask we've had here at Upright since we started, originally coming from Le Bete winery in McMinnville. This particular barrel has always yielded an exceptional acid and mineral profile in all the beers that have passed through it, taking something otherwise balanced and mellow like the Saison Vert and adding sharper layers while extending the finish. The black limes remained remarkably intact after 14 months on oak and our usual long conditioning time in the bottle, making the beer taste very bright. This one is best enjoyed now but will likely age very well into 2019.
