

This unusual bottling began as a single cask version of a triticale saison simply named Sideline. That beer was well hopped to begin with and had roughly 20% barrel aged Seven blended in from a cask that was inoculated with brettanomyces bruxellensis trois vrai. This strain of brett showed only a little in the initial release of the Sideline, but this Sole Composition version was aged in the same cask that the Seven came from and was allowed to develop throughout the summer. It now dominates the profile with attractive fruit flavors, while the addition of fresh liberty hops during the final week of barrel maturation lends a pleasant lemon character and lush mouthfeel akin to fuller bodied white wines.
