

Scrap Iron was brewed as a nod to two specific historic beers from Belgium – Saison de Pipaix and Orval. Both of those are legendary and rooted well in the past, with fascinating profiles that exude character and individuality. Many modern interpretations of Belgian style beers seem to miss that mark, relying on a narrow spectrum within aroma, flavor, mouthfeel, and finish. Instead, the Scrap Iron strives to integrate layers rarely seen anymore – metallic notes, semi-coarse bitterness, restrained brettanomyces, dry hopping with low oil varieties, and delicate yet purposeful spicing.

Scrap Iron is an industrial saison inspired by 19th century Belgian ales full of rustic character and complexities
